

Contributors

Editors

Alton Grizzle is a Program Specialist in Communication and Information at the UNESCO headquarters in Paris, France. He is a UNESCO focal point on gender and media and is the co-manager of UNESCO's global actions on media and information literacy (MIL). He has a diverse education background in the fields of education, management, information systems, and media and communication. He has conceptualized and spearheaded many projects and has co-authored and edited numerous books and articles relating to MIL, gender and media, media development, and communication for development. Prior to UNESCO, he worked as an educator/principal for 10 years at the secondary-school and adult vocational training levels in education systems in Jamaica. Email: a.grizzle@unesco.org

Maarit Jaakkola is a Co-Director of the Nordic Center of Media Research Nordicom and an Associate Professor of Journalism in the Department of Journalism, Media, and Communication (JMG) at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden. Her research interests focus on interdisciplinary questions of culture, media, and learning. Recently, she has investigated questions related to cultural journalism, user-generated reviewing and amateur digital cultural production, journalistic media education, and signature pedagogies of journalism education. She is the founder and coordinator of the national MIL research network in Sweden and the editor-in-chief of NordMedia Network, a digital community platform for Nordic media and communication researchers. Currently, she is a co-chair of the UNESCO-UNAOc MILID Network and chair of the NordMedia media literacy and media education division. Email: maarit.jaakkola@gu.se

Tomás Durán-Becerra is the General Research Director at the UNIMINUTO University and the head of research at the Social Innovation Scientific Park (PCIS), Colombia. He holds a PhD in Communication Studies and Journalism. His research interests focus on MIL, ICT, education policy, and quality in education and communication practices. He is a member of the UNESCO-UNAOc MILID Network. Email: tomasduranb@gmail.com

Authors

Agnaldo Arroio is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Education of the University of São Paulo and the head of the Department of Teaching Methodology and Comparative Education (2018–2020, 2020–2022), Brazil. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Chemistry from the University of São Paulo (1996), a Master's degree in Chemistry (physics and chemistry) from the University of São Paulo (1999), and a PhD in Physics and Chemistry from the University of São Paulo and Audiovisual Production by the Federal University of São Carlos (2004). He completed his post-doctorate in education at the University of São Paulo (2005) and his licentiate in science education at the Faculty of Education of the University of São Paulo in 2011. He has been a representative of South America at the International Board IOSTE—International Organization for Science and Technology Education—(2010–2012, 2012–2014), President of IOSTE (2018–2020), Director of Education of the Brazilian Chemical Association ABQ (2013–2015, 2015–2017), and Director of International Affairs at ABQ (2017–2019), as well as Coordinator of the Dinter Interinstitutional Doctorate UFPI-FEUSP. He was a visiting expert at the Ministry of Health, the Republic of Mozambique; Siauliai University, Lithuania; and Beijing Normal University, China. His main areas of specialty include chemistry and communication and education with emphasis on audiovisual communication in education. Email: agnaldoarroio@yahoo.com

Leo Van Audenhove is a Professor of International Communication at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB), Belgium, and an Extraordinary Professor at the University of the Western Cape, South Africa. He is the director of the Flemish Knowledge Center for Digital and Media Literacy, an organization established by the Flemish government to promote media literacy. Prof. Van Audenhove is also a senior researcher in the research group of the Interuniversity Microelectronics Center, Studies in Media, Innovation, and Technology (IMEC-SMIT), at VUB. His research focuses on media literacy, digital inclusion, and ICT4D. Email: leo.van.audenhove@vub.be

Pieter Ballon is a Professor of Communication Sciences at the VUB, Belgium. His research focuses on digital platforms in media and in cities. He is the director of the research center SMIT at IMEC, a global research and development center for nanoelectronics and digital innovation. He is also the scientific co-director of the Flemish Knowledge Center on Data and Society and the Hannah Arendt Institute at VUB. Since 2017, he has been the VUB Academic Chair on Smart Cities. Email: pieter.ballon@vub.ac.be

Beatrice Bonami is a PhD student in communication and education at the University of São Paulo, Brazil. She has a Master's degree in Communication and Education from the University of São Paulo and graduated in social communications and arts. She is currently an Associated Researcher and Project Coordinator at the Social Technology Research Laboratory at the School of the Future, University of São Paulo. Bonami is UNESCO's Global Alliance on Media Information Literacy (GAPMIL) Latin America and Caribbean Chapter member. She is the author of Media and Information Literacy: Concept and History, published by Prismas. Email: beatrice.br@usp.br

Deborah Brennan is a Lecturer in Engineering Computation, Data Analytics, and Research Methods at the School of Multidisciplinary Technologies, Technological University (TU) Dublin, Ireland. In 2017, she co-founded TU Dublin's Center of Critical Media Literacy with Dr. Harry Browne of TU Dublin's School of Media. The Center invites participation from diverse disciplines and communities in a broad-ranging conversation about new and legacy media using a variety of tools and approaches. Brennan holds a BSc in Theoretical Physics and Applied Mathematics and an MSc in Applied Computing. She is a member of the Institute of Physics, London, and is currently pursuing doctoral research in Equality Studies in the area of inclusive education at University College Dublin. Email: deborah.brennan@tudublin.ie

Wendy Van den Broeck is a Professor in Communication Studies at the VUB, Belgium, and the head of the Media Innovations and Living Labs unit at the IMEC-SMIT research group. Her main research expertise is in the domain of personalized and immersive media and smart education. She also specializes in research methodology, focusing mainly on living lab research and user research methods. Email: wendy.van.den.broeck@vub.be

Harry Browne lectures at the School of Multidisciplinary Technologies and School of Media at TU Dublin, Ireland. He coordinates the Center for Critical Media Literacy, a research and outreach group at TU Dublin. Previously, he worked as a journalist for many years, writing for a diverse range of newspapers, magazines, journals, and websites. Email: harry.browne@dit.ie

Patrick Burton is the Executive Director of the Center for Justice and Crime Prevention, South Africa. He has extensive experience at both a research and policy level on child and youth victimization, school violence prevention, and youth resilience. He has worked on the development and implementation of a National School Safety Framework for the National Department of Basic Education in South Africa and the integration of online safety into national education policies. His current research interests lie in cyberbullying, online safety, and young people's online experiences, both positive and negative. His recent research includes a UNICEF-partnered qualitative study exploring how young people navigate their online safety. His current work includes the Optimus Study South Africa, a national incidence and prevalence study of 10,000 children that examines child abuse, violence, and neglect in South Africa; a global review of evidence of what successfully prevents online child exploitation, violence, and abuse and in promoting digital opportunities; a regional study on policies, legislation, and interventions addressing online child sexual exploitation for the Middle East and North Africa region in Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, and Jordan; a scoping and mapping exercise of the online child protection landscape in Uganda; and providing technical assistance to UNICEF Namibia on their online child safety research. He is the group chair of the Violence in Schools Learning Group of the Know Violence in Childhood Global Learning Initiative. Email: patrick@cjcp.org.za

Patricio Cabello is a Professor of Psychology at the Academy of Christian Humanism University (Universidad Academia de Humanismo Cristiano) in Santiago de Chile, Chile. He is a psychologist with a PhD degree in Social Psychology, with Master's degrees in Anthropology and in Social Research methods. Patricio is a principal investigator of Kids Online Chile and also leads other research projects on children, adolescents, participation, environmental and community media, pluralism, and digital media. Email: patriciocabello@gmail.com

Michelle Ciccone is a K-12 educator and curriculum developer who is passionate about digital literacy, media literacy, and digital citizenship in the United States. She is currently the technology integration specialist at a Massachusetts high school, where she develops and deploys a vertically aligned strategic vision for technology integration across content areas and grades. In a previous position, she developed the curriculum for and taught a digital literacy class to sixth, seventh, and eighth graders. Michelle is an affiliated faculty member at the Media Education Lab at the University of Rhode Island and, in 2019, was awarded third place in AEJMC's Best Practices in Teaching Media Literacy competition. Email: michelle.ciccone@gmail.com

Andy Demeulenaere is a media literacy expert who coordinates the team of IMEC's Mediawijs, the Flemish Knowledge Center for Digital and Media Literacy. He has presided over the Flemish No Hate Speech Platform for the regional coordination of the movement by the Council of Europe; is a member of the Flemish Strategic Advice Council for Culture, Department of Media (SARC-Media); represents Flanders in the Digital Citizenship Working Group of European Schoolnet; and attends the Media Literacy Expert Group of the European Commission. Email: andy.demeulenaere@imec.be

ElsaMarie D'Silva is the founder and Chief Executive Officer of Red Dot Foundation in India and President of Red Dot Foundation Global in the United States. Its platform, Safecity, crowdsources personal experiences of sexual violence and abuse in public spaces. Since its launching in December 2012, Safecity has become the largest crowd map on the issue in India and abroad. D'Silva is listed as one of BBC Hindi's 100 Women and has won several awards including Government of India Niti Aayog's #Women Transforming India award and The Digital Woman Award in Social Impact by SheThePeople. In 2017, she was awarded the Global Leadership Award by Vital Voices in the presence of former US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. She is also the recipient of the 2016 Gold Stevie Award for Female Executive of the Year, Government or Non-Profit: 10 or Less Employees. Her work has been recognized by the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations through the Intercultural Innovation Award, the SDG Action Festival, and the UN Foundation at the Solutions Summit 2016. Email: elsamaries@gmail.com

Michele Filippo Fontefrancesco is an Assistant Professor of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Gastronomic Sciences, Italy, and actively collaborates with private and public institutions as a research consultant. He completed his professional training in Italy (Bachelor's and Master's degrees, University of Eastern Piedmont), Poland (Erasmus Master student at Adam Mickiewicz University), and the United Kingdom (PhD, Durham University). His research concerns local development in European and African contexts, with a particular focus on social innovation and social inclusion. For Newton.spa, between 2017 and 2019, Fontefrancesco was the scientific coordinator of the three-year project "Words are Stones", funded by the European Union's Rights, Equality and Citizenship Program. Email: m.fontefrancesco@unisg.it

Lisa Jane de Gara is a media educator from Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, where she currently works as a policy coordinator for the government of Alberta. She holds a Master's degree in Public Administration from the University of Saskatchewan and a Bachelor's degree in Political Science from McGill University in Montreal. She believes strongly in the benefits of a more adept and digitally capable government. Much of her current research concerns the social elements of the internet, including internet memes and political interference on the internet. Email: lj.degara@usask.ca

Masatoshi Hamada is an invited researcher at the University Paris VIII in France. He holds an MBA certified by L'École Supérieure de Commerce et de Management (ESCEM) in France and a PhD in Statistical Science. He has been a contributor to UNESCO research initiatives since 2014 and has served as a co-researcher in the Media and Information Literacy Expansion (MIL<sup>x</sup>) initiative. He has studied vulnerable populations and offered intervention ideas for mental health practitioners in Japan since the tsunami of March 11, 2011. His research interests focus on child and youth development through MIL combined with art therapy. Recently, he has studied the aesthetic development of children, intersubjectivity in children's free and spontaneous art activities during their refugee life, and artistic edutainment through MIL<sup>x</sup>. His work affirms the value of positive emotions in children and young people, among whom he has conducted volunteer-based fieldwork in elementary and junior high schools in disaster areas and children's playgrounds in Nijiuro-Kureyon, Japan, and through the Hackney Play Association in the United Kingdom. Email: bonjour.hamahama@gmail.com

Ellen Helsper is the Director of Graduate Studies and an Associate Professor in the Media and Communications Department at the London School of Economics and Political Science. Her current research interests include new media audiences, digital inclusion, mediated interpersonal communication, and quantitative and qualitative methodological developments in media research. The four main research projects that she is currently involved in are the Networked Motivation Aspects of Digital Inequalities, From Digital Skills to Tangible Outcomes, Global Kids Online, and longitudinal World Internet projects. She is also working with Masterclass on a Cyberscene Theater production concerning cyberbullying. Other studies that she has been involved in include a European Commission project relating to online advertising and children; Wisekids Wales; youth at risk and ICTs; the social impacts of ICT; net addiction; Me, my spouse and the internet; and online gambling. Ellen holds visiting scholar positions at New York University Steinhardt's Department of Media, Culture, and Communications; the University of Southern California's Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism; and the University of Twente's Media, Communication, and Organization Department. Email: E.J.Helsper@lse.ac.uk

Rob Heyman is a coordinator of the Knowledge Center Data and Society (Kenniscentrum Data and Maatschappij), an initiative that is part of the Flemish strategic plan on artificial intelligence. He is a senior researcher in the research group IMEC-SMIT at the VUB, Belgium, where he researches participative methods in innovation projects between different stakeholders (legal, civil society, and end users) so that societal, legal, and ethical values are integrated during development. He leads the Expert Group on Privacy, Ethics, Trust, and Security at City of Things. Email: rob.heyman@vub.ac.be

Petar Kanchev is an expert working on the Safer Internet program at the Applied Research and Communications Fund in Bulgaria, where he is responsible for scientific and applied research on children's online behavior and for conducting critical thinking and media and digital literacy training for children and young people. His expertise also includes developing, testing, publishing, and applying innovative methods related to the integration of digital and media literacy into the Bulgarian national school curriculum. He has an MSc degree in Cognitive Science from New Bulgarian University (Sofia, Bulgaria). He has previously worked as a financial analyst for Avery Dennison Inc. (Leiden, The Netherlands) and took part in a two-year Teach for Bulgaria training program, allowing him to teach psychology, logic, law, philosophy, and English as a second language at the Agro-Technical Professional High School in Zlatica, Bulgaria. Email: petar.kanchev@online.bg

Daniel Kardefelt-Winther leads the research program on Children and Digital Technology at UNICEF Office of Research–Innocenti. He is a quantitative researcher with many years of experience in designing and coordinating multinational evidence generation projects. In his role at UNICEF, he works at the intersection of children's rights and digital technology, focusing on contemporary and future challenges and opportunities for children in a digital world. He works with UNICEF country and regional offices on a range of projects related to children and digital technology, providing technical advice, training, research design, coordination, implementation support, and data analysis. Prior to joining UNICEF, his research focused on cognitive, behavioral, and health outcomes from excessive use of digital technology and online gaming. Daniel holds a PhD from the London School of Economics and a post-doctoral research position in the Department of Clinical Neuroscience at the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, Sweden. Email: dkardefeltwinther@unicef.org

Alexandre Le Voci Sayad is a Brazilian journalist and educator specializing in media literacy and education. He has been part of the “Innovation Program,” a post-graduation initiative of the University of California, Berkeley. He founded the Media Education Lab and MyFunCity (a social network focused on municipalities awarded by the United Nation's WSA Mobile). Currently, he is the president and founder of ZeitGeist—Education, Culture, and Media. Sayad is UNESCO's GAPMIL Latin America and Caribbean representative. He is also a member of the board of consultants of REPENSE (communication agency). He is the co-founder and a member of the board of ABPEDUCOM (a Brazilian association of MIL professionals). He has authored several books on education and human rights, including Idade Mídia—A Comunicação Reinventada na Escola, published by Aleph. Email: alevoci@gmail.com

Sonia Livingstone is a Professor of Social Psychology in the Department of Media and Communications at the London School of Economics and Political Science. Taking a comparative, critical, and contextual approach, her research examines how the changing conditions of mediation are reshaping everyday practices and possibilities for action. She has published 20 books on media audiences, media literacy, and media regulation, with a particular focus on the opportunities and risks of digital media use in the everyday lives of children and young people. Her most recent book is The Class: Living and Learning in the Digital Age (2016, with Julian Sefton-Green). Livingstone has advised the government of the United Kingdom, the European Commission, the European Parliament, the Council of Europe, and other national and international organizations on children's rights and on risks and safety in the digital age. She was awarded the title of Officer of the Order of the British Empire in 2014 “for services to children and child internet safety.” Email: S.Livingstone@lse.ac.uk

Estrella Luna Muñoz is a coordinator, project manager, and trainer for several projects with a focus on MIL, educational innovation, intercultural dialogue, and art and social community integration. Some of the countries wherein she has been active are Mexico, Spain, Portugal, Honduras, and Cape Verde. She holds a PhD in Education with Information and Communication Technology and is a specialist in Media and ICT for youth empowerment and social integration, in which capacity she has been invited to speak at several conferences, including some organized by UNESCO. She is the Coordinator and Young People Programs Facilitator at AMARNA Academy and a member of the collective Tráfico Libre de Conocimientos, which promotes collaborative forms of production, distribution, and consumption of information and knowledge with art in Mexico. Email: estrella.luna.m@gmail.com

Gerardo Machuca is currently working as a research leader at the Pedagogical Innovation and Peace-Building group at the Corporación Unificada Nacional de Educación Superior (CUN University) in Bogota, Colombia. He holds a PhD in Education. Email: g.machucatellez@gmail.com

Ilse Mariën is a post-doctoral researcher in the IMEC-SMIT research group at the VUB, Belgium, where she directs several policy-oriented projects related to the societal impact of digitalization, digital inequalities, digital skills, and e-inclusion. Mariën heads the Data Governance and Communities Unit—a team of over 19 junior and senior researchers—and coordinates the Databuzz program, which focuses on strengthening data literacy in schools and adult education. She also teaches policy analysis in the Communication Science Department at VUB. Email: ilse.marien@vub.ac.be

Clara Cacilda Mauaie is a health specialist and employee in the Ministry of Health of Mozambique, assigned to the National Directorate for Training of Health Professionals in the Department of Norms and Curriculum Development. She holds a Master's degree in Public Health from the National School of Public Health Fiocruz in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil (2017). She graduated from the degree course Planning, Administration, and School Management at Universidade Pedagógica (2011). She has been responsible for outlining the curriculum of standards based on competences in different areas of health training since 2012. She teaches qualitative and quantitative methods in health at the Faculty of Health Sciences, Catholic University of Mozambique (2018) and teaches methodologies at the Pedagogical University (2018 and 2019). She also taught planning and health administration at the Maputo Institute of Health Sciences (2015–2016). Email: claramauaie@gmail.com

Ayodeji Olonode is a doctoral researcher in Cultural and Media Studies at the Institute of African Studies, University of Ibadan, Nigeria. Issues in media and communication studies foreground his research interests, with a specific focus on the application of communication theories, new media, and digital culture as well as a burgeoning interest in MIL. His research interests also include the multidisciplinary intersection of post-colonial studies and social movements, with a particular focus on Nigeria and West Africa. Currently, he is working for the government of the Osun state in south-western Nigeria on a special assignment involving information and civic orientation, concentrating on advocacy for the socially, legally, and ethically responsible production and dissemination of information from government to the people while reinforcing competencies in MIL. Email: dejiolonode@yahoo.com

Jelena Perović is the Communication Officer at UNICEF Montenegro. She holds a PhD in Communication Science from the Sapienza University of Rome, Italy. Her PhD thesis explored media education in Montenegro. In that role, she coordinated the Global Kids Online research in Montenegro, along with several campaigns that promoted child digital safety and participation, the inclusion of children with disabilities, preschool education, and fostering. Prior to joining UNICEF, she worked for Save the Children. Her research interests are related to children and media, media literacy/media education, communication for development and social change, and child participation. Email: jperovic@unicef.org

Mariya Stoilova holds a post-doctoral research position at the London School of Economics and Political Science. She works as a research officer in the Global Kids Online project. Her research focuses on children's rights, digital technology, well-being, citizenship, and inequalities. With a strong focus on multi-method evidence generation and cross-national comparative analyses, her work lies at the intersection of children's rights and digital technology use, well-being and family support, and intimate life, citizenship, and social inequalities. Email: m.stoilova@lse.ac.uk

Nils Walravens is a Senior Researcher in the IMEC-SMIT research group at the VUB, Belgium, which focuses on smart cities, open data, data-driven policymaking, and complex value networks. He coordinated the Smart Flanders program of the Flemish Government, supporting the 13 center cities of Flanders in their efforts to develop a joint approach to opening data. He holds a PhD in Media and Communication Studies from VBU (2016). Email: nils.walravens@vub.ac.be

Ssu-Han Yu is a media literacy practitioner interested in researching political participation, democracy, citizenship, and national identity. Yu earned a Bachelor's degree in English and Japanese. In the final year of her undergraduate study, she was an exchange student in the Department of Communication, University of Jyväskylä, Finland. Between her first Master's degree in Journalism, from National Taiwan University (NTU), and her second one in Media and Communications at the London School of Economics and Political Science, she worked as a research assistant with Dr. Chiu on health communication in the Department of Bio-Industry Communication and Development, NTU. During her time there, she witnessed and participated in the Sunflower Movement of 2014 and the Anti-Black Box Curriculum Movement of 2015. Email: S.Yu9@lse.ac.uk